

A BIM catalogue is a first glance into a company and its products. This is why quality is necessary to project a good company image. However, if a company does not have the right skill and know-how in key areas, there is a risk of losing potential sales.

In Manufacturers in BIM, we offer specialized services in BIM training to product manufacturing companies. Such services are aimed the three most fundamental areas/departments within a company.

Technical department: Training is focused in this department so that a company can gain the knowledge and know how to handle product information to include in a BIM project.

Technical know-how and information quality assurance can allow specialized people from the company to edit, lock, or expand information in existing BIM files that are, or will be, included in BIM projects.

Marketing department: A BIM file is a promotional tool for a company. This is why the marketing department should be aware of the implications of working in BIM and its influence on the industry.

Sales department: Company sales teams should be prepared to work in a growing BIM environment. BIM training prepares them to be able to detect potential clients, solve issues with existing clients, and offer BIM solutions suited to each need.
